"I could hardly have believed two years ago that I should ever be at all interested in attending a meeting of life insurance agents. "We, and those connected with this Society, have very much apon which to congratulate ourselves. It seems as if Providence had co-operated and directed us in the way which led to the rehabilitation of our old-time position and standing in the confidence of the people of the country. I am convinced that no human agency has contributed more to bring about this happy result than the oyalty and interest and intelligent work of the agents of our Society.

"I do not employ any figure of speech or include in any exaggeration when I say to you that this body of agents must be regarded as the hands with which The Equitable, as well as every other life insurance company, does its work. The results which we have been able to command in the way of reform have grown ou of a sincere and honest effort to bring about an effective reform.

"There has never been a better illustration of what sincerity of purpose, intelligent regard for duty, and unceasing work can do the interest of a great trust confided to a set of men, than that which has been accomplished by The Equitable Society in its home or ganization. While that has been the main characteristic and the main instrument, so in the field, among our agents, this same high spirit and high intent have actuated them in doing their full share in reaching the end for which all have striven so earnestly.
